Training is an Investment

“If you wish to plan for a year – sow seeds; if you wish to plan for ten years – plant trees; if you wish to plan for a lifetime – develop people.”

What exactly do we mean by training?

The definition of training should be the development and delivery of information that people will apply after learning, towards the goals of skill development and performance improvement. This definition distinguishes training from other methods of learning, where people are provided with information, but not necessarily expected to use it.

How to identify or assess the training need: ‘The gap between the knowledge, skills and attitudes required in a job and the knowledge, skills and attitudes of the person carrying out the job, is the starting point of all training.

- Change in culture, place or environment.
- Change in people or posts.
- Change in technology.
- Growth or reduction in an organization.
- Change in job or responsibilities.

This training need will fall into one of the below mentioned four areas:

1. JOB TRAINING: Training to give an employee the basic knowledge, skills and attitudes to carry out a task.
2. PERFORMANCE TRAINING: Training to improve on current satisfactory performance or to overcome identified weakness in the current job.
3. INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT: Training to add to or develop knowledge, skills and attitudes for a different job (at a higher level or a different job at the same level).
4. CHANGE TRAINING: Training to cope with expected changes ; (changes in the organization, products, processes, policies, procedures or methods.)

Why Atassh for Training?

- Breadth of experience in the situation and/or the subject, area and/or type of organization involved.
- Up-to-date knowledge in relevant areas.
- Having an objective viewpoint.
- Willingness to question established norms or accepted practices.
- Specialized expertise.
- Credibility or value perceived as greater than that of internal staff.
- Freedom from worry about hierarchies and relative seniorities of staff & management.
- Willingness and ability to speak freely and listen to people and managers at all levels within the organization.
- Trainees within the organization will be more open and willing to listen and heed us.
- Staff is not affected or constrained by internal politics.
- We act as mentor, philosopher and guide not as TRAINERS.

'MONEY SPENT ON THE BRAINS IS NEVER SPENT IN VAIN'

The undersigned gives his unconditional commitment for the same. The willingness for extensive travels is also a pledge commitment

Thanking you and assuring you of our best services and cooperation at all times.
